

HOPPO, THE DOC & THE NEANDERTHAL

For most country towns in southeast Australia, much of the social life in winter revolves around their Football and Net Ball Clubs. Football, especially, brings a sense of belonging to rural communities, uniting them in a common cause, albeit superficial, slight and ephemeral. Your teams success or lack of success the previous Sunday is a talking point for most of the following week and helps the locals take their minds off their daily struggles in life. This short tale is about a particular incident that occurred at the footy last season in my home town. An incident that continues to capture the imagination of the locals as its retold again and again, enhanced and exaggerated, firmly entrenching itself into local folklore. This is the legendary tale about Hopppo, The Doc and the Neanderthal.
