

You Dont Look Like A Minister

Here are candid observations and quips from a minister with over 35 years experience. These 36 delightful essays will be instantly recognized by anyone who serves a parish ministry. Consider ... You can never hide the fact that you are a clergyman. Maybe its the way we usually sit down front it could be the shameless way we sing hymns as though they were meant to be heard. Ive gone to church in a sport shirt and pastel slacks and had people say to me, You dont look like a minister, but you sure do sing like one. Personally, Ive always thought of heaven as down, like down in the Caribbean in February. The ad in the church supplies magazine said, We put the van into evangelical. It was from a company that sells buses and other vehicles to churches. If you cant afford a van look what Peter did with only a pair of sandals and a heart of love. During a sermon, a spider dropped down from the end of the microphone. Ordinarily, I can take spiders, but in the middle of a sermon, I dont need any more distraction. I get enough sirens, coughers and bookdroppers -- and people who sit there grinning and I cant figure out why. Paul A. Corcoran is a retired Presbyterian pastor who has served parishes in the United States and England and has taught at the University of Pittsburgh and Dickenson College, Carlisle, Pennsylvania. Corcorans other CSS title is With All Due Respect. This book was originally published under the title Dont Wash Your Antependia.
